Q1. Professional Development Narratives – North Central Region

Subject Area #4: Cultural Competency

Training on cultural competency, diversity, equity, and inclusion (DEI) helps our staff advance a diverse, equitable and inclusive community and workplace. This training helps staff understand the roles of power, privilege, oppression, and social identities within our communities and organizations, and broadens understanding of historical and current barriers that impact the lives of constituents and colleagues at personal, interpersonal, institutional and culture levels. Training in DEI and cultural competency helps staff to understand their own culture, socialization and social identities and to recognize and appropriately respond and adapt to cultural similarities and differences.

Q5. Provide a brief description of the professional development program that addresses Cultural Competency. [Less than 250 words.]

*If you do not offer training on Cultural Competency, please state that here, and return the survey.

Extension's Learning Community for Inclusive Organizational Citizenship (Learning Community) is a cohort-based professional learning and development opportunity open to all Extension staff. It is a sustained community in which participants commit to weekly engagement over critical equity topics including race and racism, power and privilege, disability and ableism, gender justice, and more. Participants meet virtually and in-person and learning is facilitated with the support of self-directed readings, dialogue, reflection, and other pedagogical approaches. During the course of the Learning Community, participants will closely examine how current and historical issues shape their personal and professional lives, and how they influence the context of Extension work across the state. Participants will explore topics that include: race, identity, intersectionality, power and privilege; ableism and disability justice; gender, gender identity and sexuality; anti-racism; inclusive leadership; and generative conflict Program objectives: -Reflect on and begin to deconstruct our socialized beliefs about race, whiteness, identity and power. -Build an understanding of oppression as a force that operates on 4 levels: ideological, interpersonal, institutional, and internalized. -Develop ways to notice and address power and privilege in the workplace. -Build tools and an overarching anti-racist and social justice lens that foster equity and belonging in the workplace, including relationship building, tracking power, engaging in constructive conflict, and shared decision-making. -Build the capacity, skills, and resilience among participants to take personal ownership over their role in building equity.
